The Romani Community

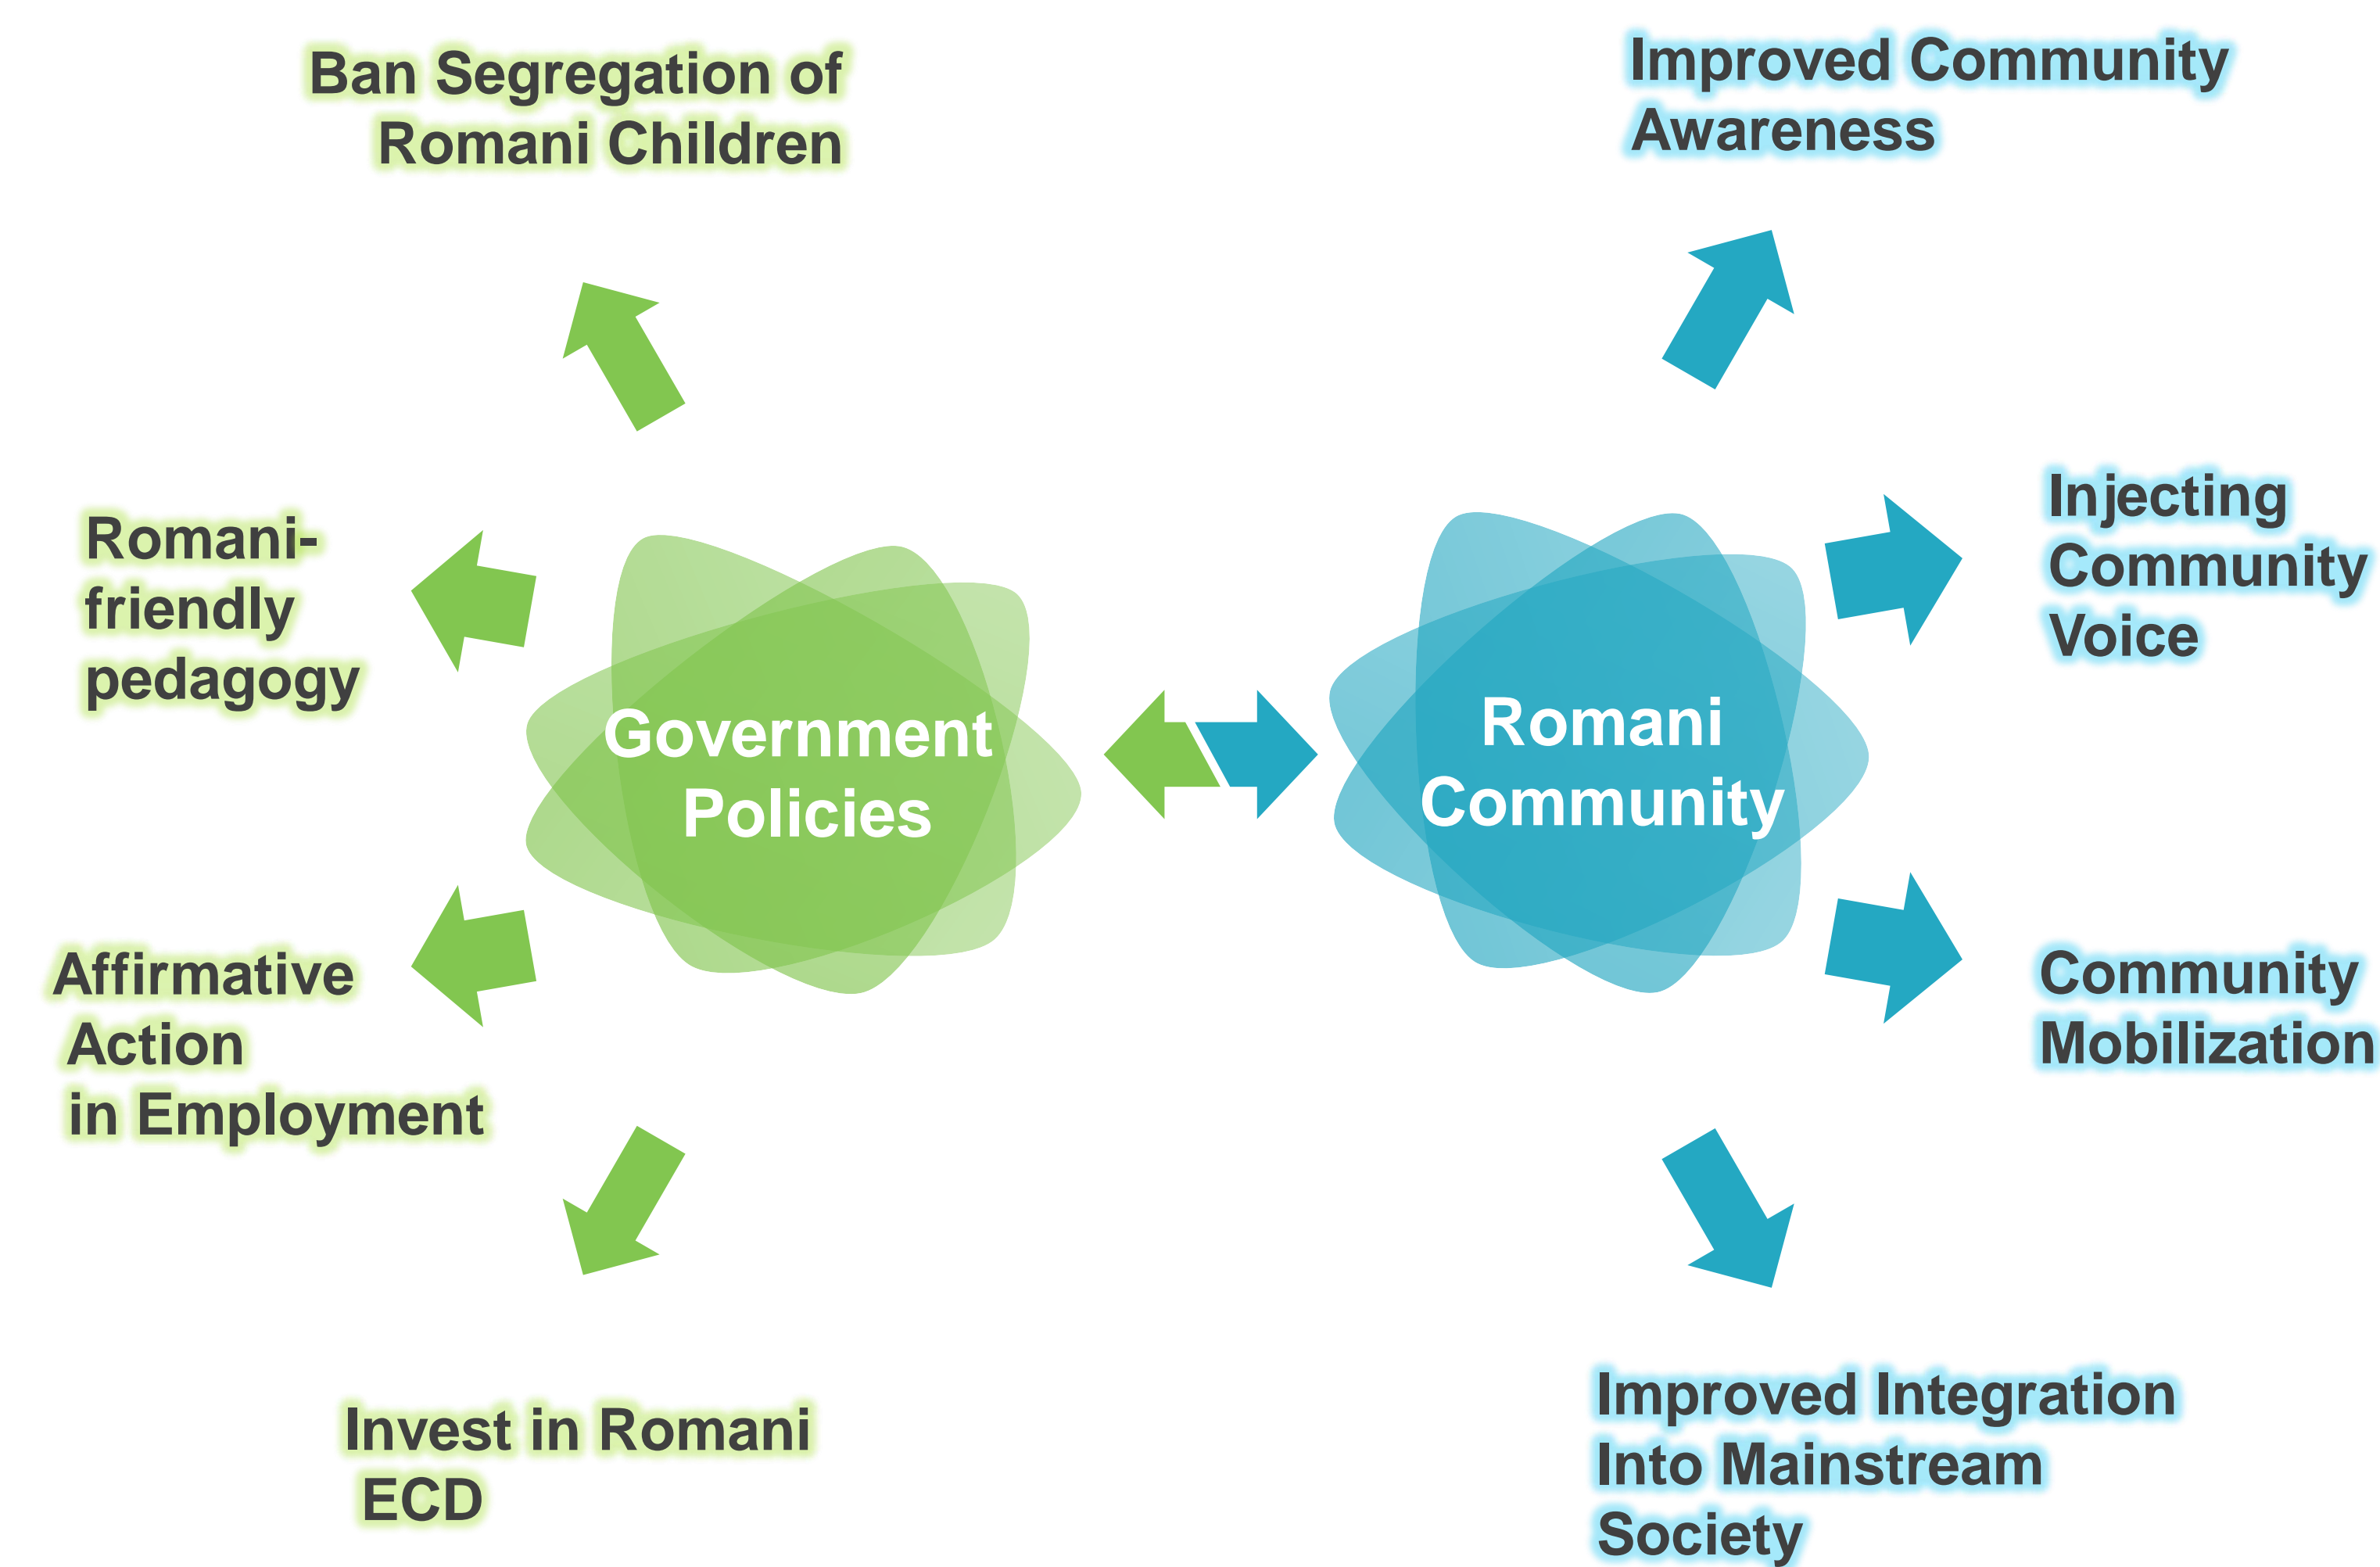

What's keeping Romani Children Out of School?

Effects of Poverty on Child Development

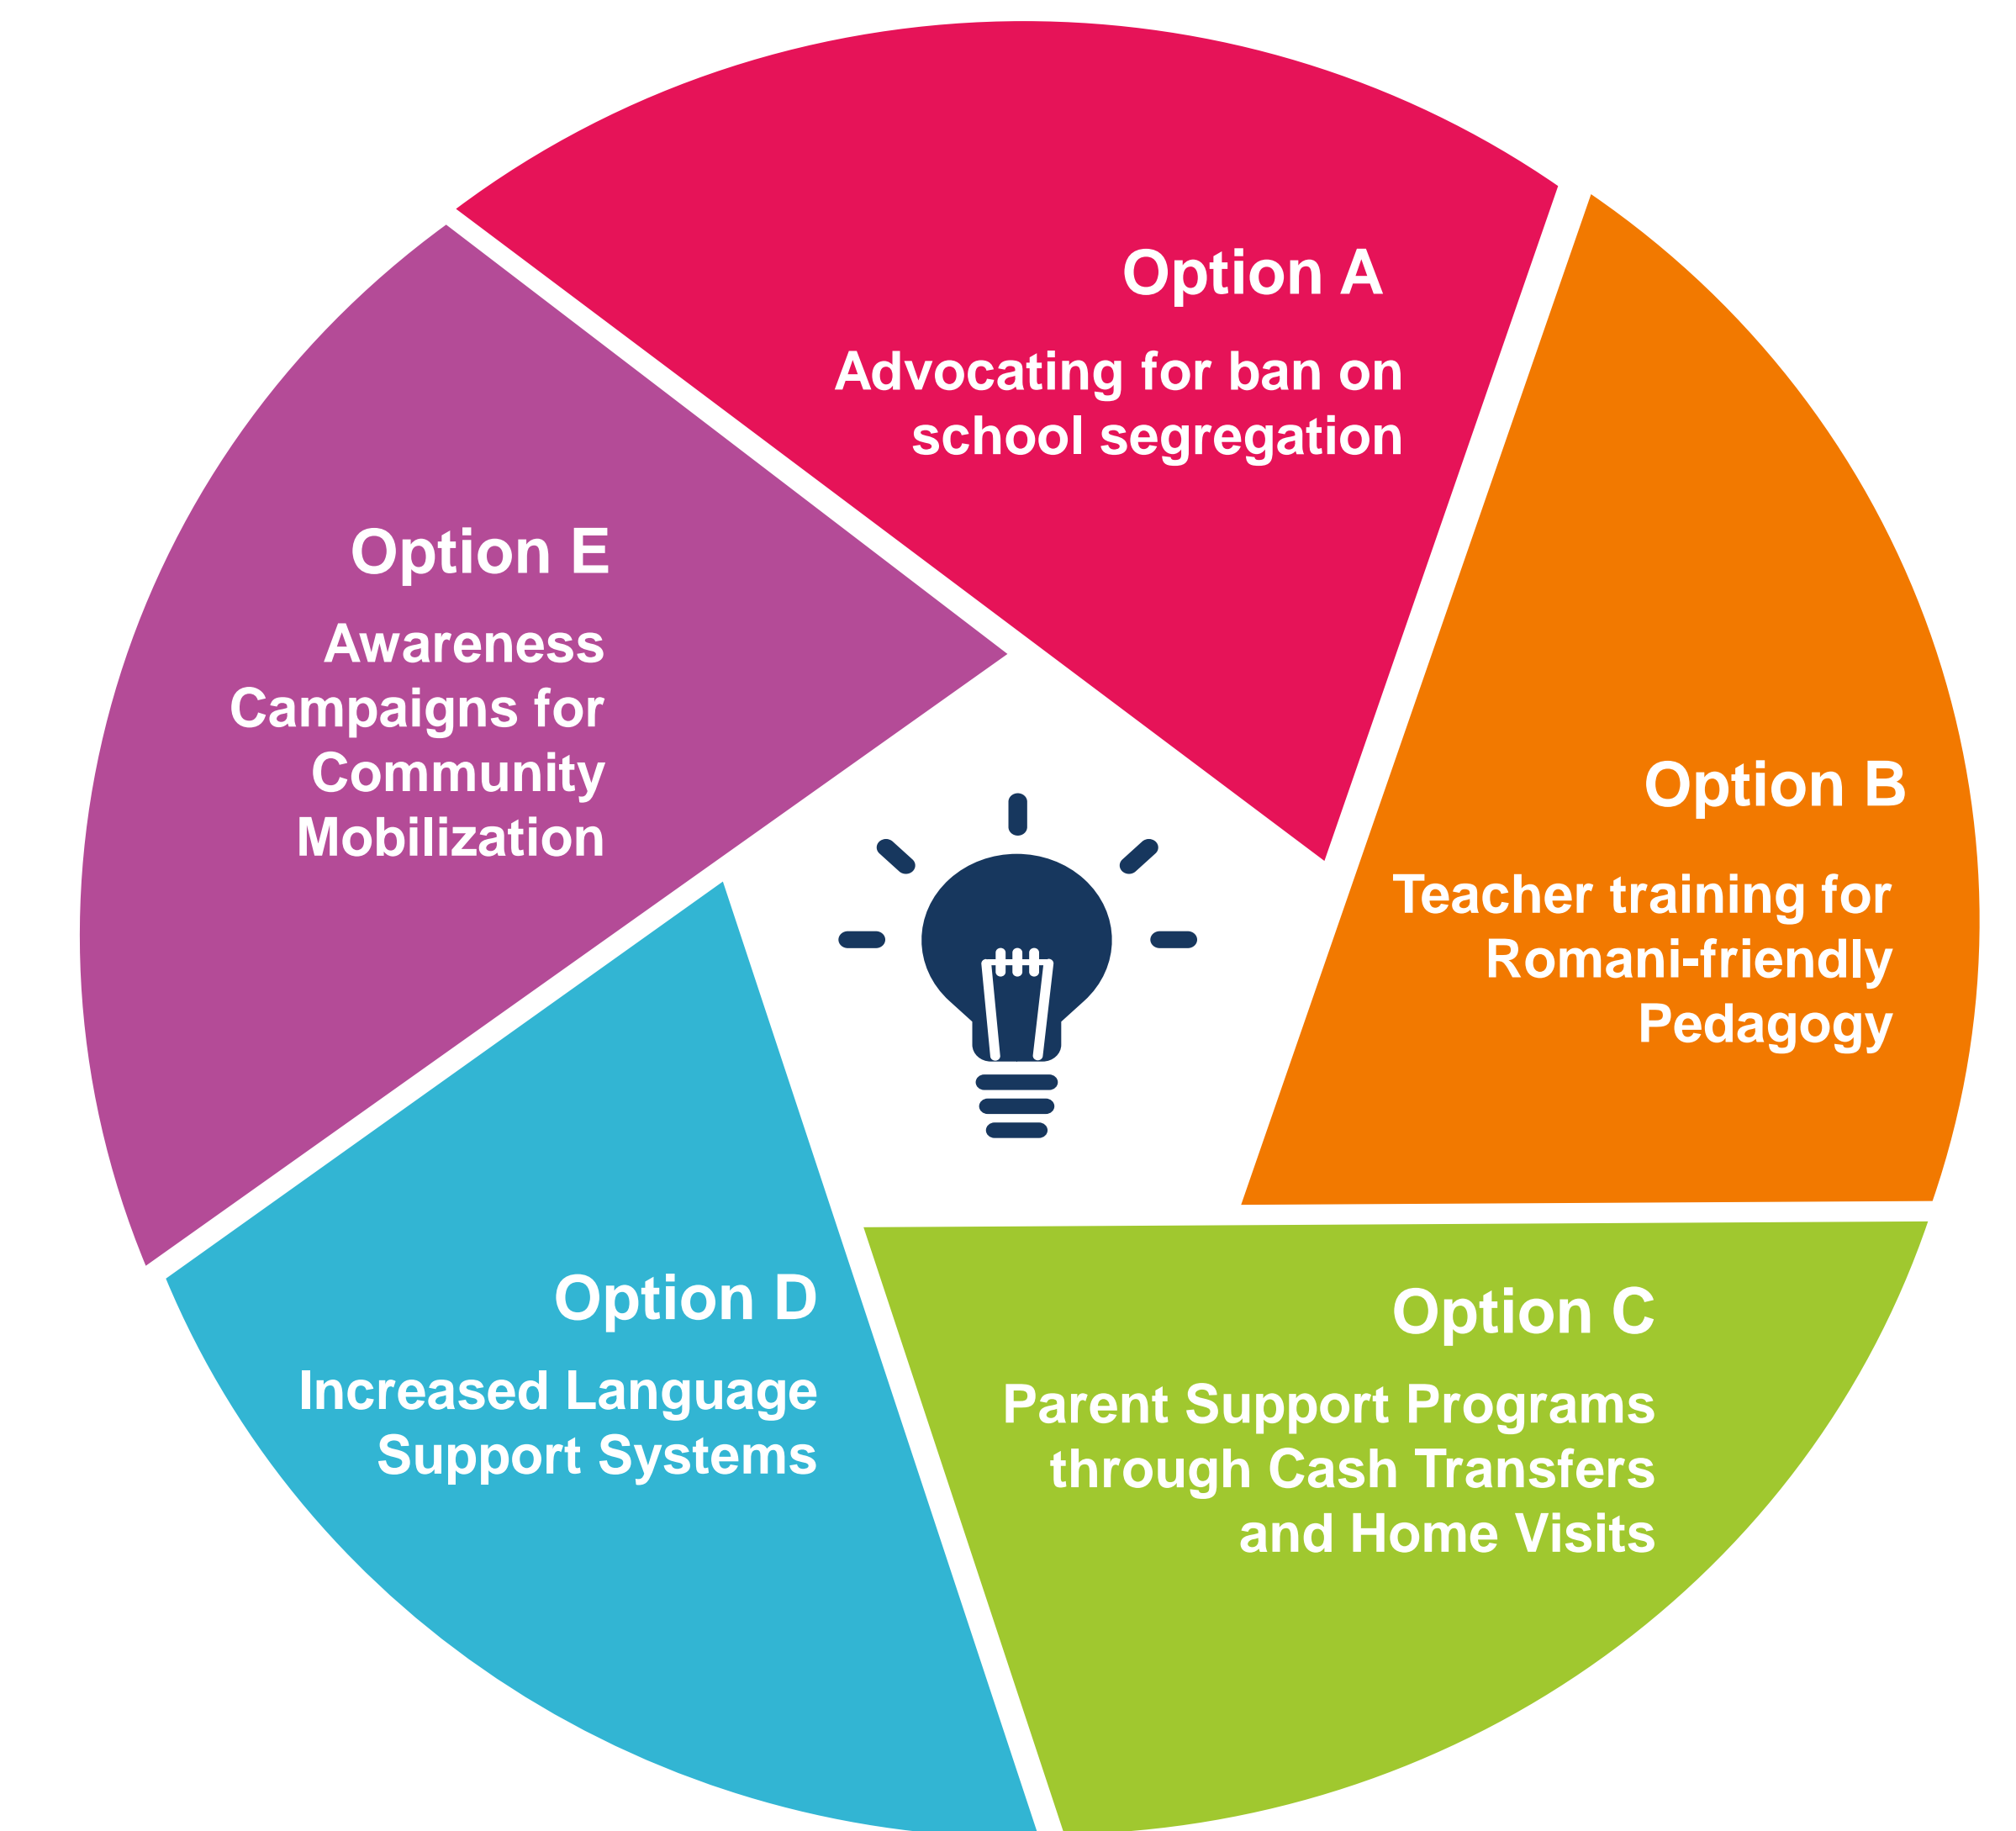

Government and Community Synergy

Governmental policies must be instituted side-by-side community action programs for effective implementation. While current policies do exist with room for improvement, partnering with community organizations and NGOs is key for involving the target population, and breathing life into the policies.

Policy Recommendations for Community Organizations

Previous policies such as quota reservations and affirmative action have had minimal impact on Romani children's longitudinal learning outcomes and mainstream integration.

Without Community Buy-In, any policy change or intervention directed at the Romani community will fail, as previous policy changes directed at improving Romani education in the CZ have.

These policy recommendations are for addressing the issue of integrating Romani children into mainstream education and society through community mobilization. Recognizing the role of community organizations is the driving force to harnessing community engagement.
